To Whom It May Concern:

One the most important discussions to make when you are building a house is who will be the general contractor. His job is to make sure you get the best house possible for your money. He manages the cost of the job. He monitors the quality of the subs work. He gives advice on better ways to do the job and he has to have the courage to tell you when one of your ideas is not so bright.

When we built our house we were living in Texas and could not be here day in and day out to monitor the job. For us it was even more important that we choose some one who could fulfill the above requirements. Kenton Pass did an excellent job in each area and above all I felt that I could trust him completely. As a bonus we also got his wife Ricki. She made a big difference in helping my wife make the hundreds of decisions related to interior decorating.

We highly recommend Kenton and Ricki Pass if you are going to build a house. They are honest, easy to work with and very knowledgeable in what they do.
